U.S. 'Blocked' Latin American Peace Pact

By Alma Guillermoprieto and David Hoffman

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration believes it has "effectively blocked" what it views as an "unsatisfactory" regional peace settlement in Central America, according to a background paper prepared for a National Security Council meeting last week that the president attended.

The paper also outlines a plan to convince Americans and the rest of the world that Sunday's Nicaraguan elections were a "sham," promoting this view through U.S. embassies, politicians, labor organizations, nongovernment ev- an island of Contadora. perts and public reports.

Ninety percent of workers staved home in black townships south of Johannesburg, where 7,000 troops and police conducted house-to-house searches two weeks ago looking for "agitators," who the white minority government believes are behind the racial unrest.

An estimated 85 percent of workers in townships east of Johannesburg staved home, as did 66 percent of those in Johannesburg's main black township of Soweto, which has an estimated population of 1.5 million.

win 525 of the 538 electoral votes. His remark reflected the Resgan campaign's official line that only the District of Columbia, with three electoral votes, was safe for Mr. Mondale and that Mr. Reagan was slightly behind in Minnesota, the former vice president's home state, with 10 electoral votes.

Mr. Wirthlin predicted, based on his polls, that Mr. Reagan would get 59 percent of the national popuar vote, plus or minus two points. Democratic Party officials were avoiding such predictions. Instead, they worked to limit Republican Republican strategists were resigned to seeing the loss of at least two seats in the Senate, where the party holds a 55-to-45 majority. Among strategists on both sides, there was talk about whether this election could set in motion the realignment sought by Mr. Reagan. Mrs. Lewis of the Democratic National Committee said the party would continue to control 72 of the 99 state legislative bodies in the country. All states except Nebraska have two-house state legislatures. This dominance at the grass roots would be a buffer against loss of majority status nationally. But Mr. Wirthlin said he was watching several indicators that he said could mean a realignment was under way. He singled out the sopeople and a shift toward Republicans in voting behavior and party preference. "If there's a large readjustment in that ratio," he added of the latter factor, "we've changed the face of partisan politics."

[Mr. Gandhi's comments took on added importance because it was the first time since the slaying that either he or any senior official invoked in an obvious attempt to heal the wounds of sectarian rage.]

Mr. Wali said that apart from one isolated incident in which four persons died Monday night, New Delhi had been trouble-free. He said the government's main priority was to resettle refugees in their homes as quickly as possible. He said that refugees who were worried about further attacks would be given military escorts and army guards until they were con-vinced of their safety.

The families of those killed in the violence are to receive 10,000 rupees ($835) for each victim under a government aid package. The package also includes compensation for those wounded, grants for those who lost their homes and low-inter-est loans for traders and businessmen whose property was destroyed

The opposition leaders gave the new prime minister a note accusing the Home Ministry of failing to protect Mrs. Gandhi's life or control the riots that followed, the Press Trust of India reported.

The United News of India said that Mr. Wali had suspended two senior police officials, G.R. Gupta and D.C. Gulia, for negligence. Both had been responsible for Mrs.

Armed with Think Tanks, Jerry Brown Looks to '88

By Nancy Skelton Los Angeles Tomes Service
LOS ANGELES — While political attention in the United States was focused on the last dehate be-· iween Walter F. Mondale and Ronald Reagan last month, Edmund G. Brown Jr., trailing a gar-ment bag and a briefcase full of speech material, slipped unnoticed aboard a flight bound for Boston.

He was heading for Maine and New Hampshire to stump for the Mondale-Ferraro ticket and for a few other Democratic office seekers. In the space of two days he would speak at a state party luncheon, hoboob with several hundred rank-and-file party members at five senarate cocktail recentions and rallies, and sandwich in private

It was the kind of old-style political weekend that the former Cali- fornia governor had snubbed a few years ago. But that was before a pair of embarrassing defeats, for of West Coast politics into obscurity at the age of 44.

Now Mr. Brown is again trying to inject himself into the national political landscape, amid thoughts of running again for president of the United States. Early this year, friends say, Mr.

Brown began openly seeking their opinion about a 1988 White House race. Since then, he has consulted with prominent Democratic strategists about such a race. In a interview, Mr. Brown did not deny he might seek the presidency in 1988 or later, or that he might try to unseat Pete Wilson, the Republican who beat him for the Senate in 1982 and will be up for re-election in 1988. He made it clear that he thought a comeback

Apparent Shake-Up in Polish Police

WARSAW (WP) — General Wojciech Jaruzelski, the Polish leader, assumed Tuesday direct supervision of the Communist Party apparatus assumed Tuesday direct supervision of the Communist Party apparatus in the Ministry of Internal Affairs, which oversees the country's police forces. The apparent shake-up of responsibility follows the involvement of internal affairs police in the murder of the Reverend Jerzy Popteluszko, an advocate of the banned Solidarity trade union.

The Internal Affairs Ministry said Tuesday that the three officers arrested for abducting the priest Oct. 19 have been charged with his murder and have pleaded guilty to the charge. The three are Captain Grzegorz Piotrowski, Lieutenant Leszek Pekala and Lieutenant Waldemar Chmielesweit

The changes at the ministry followed a meeting of the Politburo, the party's highest body. The action appeared intended to strengthen General Jaruzelski's immediate control over the country's internal security services, which have been stunned by the murder indictments. The additional powers seemed to be taken at the expense of the authority of Miroslaw Milewski, a Politburo member and party secretary with overall responsibility for the security services. Mr. Milewski, a career policeman, is associated with hard-line elements that have been on the defensive since Father Popieluszko's murder.

Belgians Set Missile Deployment Date

BRUSSELS (WP) — The Belgian government, making its strongest commitment yet to the deployment of cruise missiles, indicated Tres that the installation of the U.S.-made nuclear weapons on its soil would begin in March 1985 if the U.S.-Soviet arms talks were not revived.

The government has previously backed NATO's 1979 decision to put 572 cruise and Pershing-2 missiles in five West European countries, including Belgium, but has refused to publicly announce when the deployment of its 48 cruise missiles would begin.

The Belgian announcement left the Netherlands as the only one of the five nations that has not set a date for or begun deployment, NATO's "two track" deployment plan calls for the installation of the missiles if no ment is reached between the Soviet Union and the United States to limit medium-range missiles in Europe.

Austria Reiterates Offer on Refugees

BERLIN (Reuters) — Chancellor Fred Sinowatz of Anstria said Tuesday that Vienna would still be willing to help to solve the problem of 154 East Germans occupying the West German Embassy in Prague but that no request had been received from either German government. Mr. Sinowatz conferred on Monday with Erich Honecker, first secretary of the East German Communist Party. He said Tuesday at a news conference in East Berlin that the talks had touched on sensitive relations between East and West Germany but not on the Prague embassy

"We didn't talk about it, but let me be more precise," Mr. Sinowatz said. "Austria always gives help on condition that it is wanted. We have received no request, no indication." Austria's offer last month to grant the refugees provisional asylum was rejected by East and West Germany.

Soviet Ex-Police Chief Discredited

MOSCOW (Reuters) - Former Soviet Interior Minister Nikolsi Shcholokov has been stripped of his rank as general for abusing his position, the Soviet news agency Tass said Tuesday. A four-line report said the Soviet parliament had issued a decree removing his rank for "abuse of office and discreditation of the military rank of Soviet general." General Shcholokov was a close associate of the late President Leonid I. Brezhnev. He was fired a month after Mr. Brezhnev's death in November 1982. Informed Soviet sources have said that General Shcholokov. lokov, 73, was suspended as part of a broad sweep against high-level corruption by Mr. Brezhnev's successor, Yuri V. Andropov, former head of the KGB security police.

As interior minister from 1966 to 1982, General Shcholokov was in charge of the entire Soviet police force, a post which carries the rank of general. The sources said he was accused of shielding senior establishment figures against investigation during purges launched by Mr. Andropov while he was still KGB chief in early 1982.

Election Costs Estimated at $1 Billion WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Election Commission estimates that the final total cost for the presidential, House and Senate campaign races decided Tuesday will be more than $1 billion.

That total is up from $795 million spent on the 1982 House and Senate campaigns and $788 million in 1980 for the presidential, House and Senate races.

Delhi Revisited: Notes on the Passing of 2 Gandhis

The writer of this dispatch was the New Delhi correspondent for The New York Times from 1947 to 1954.

By Robert Trumbull New York Times Service

NEW DELHI - For a visitor who witnessed the cremation of the slain Mohandas K. Gandhi here nearly four decades ago, the similarities of the funeral of another Indian leader who had also fallen victim to religious and political passions left an eerie feeling.

But a visit Sunday to the same Hindu funeral grounds to view the still-smoking ashes of another, unrelated Gandhi—Indira—also left a sense of the profound change that has occurred here since Mohandas Gandhi was shot to death

On Sunday, the scene on the flat western bank of the Yamuna River, where only a trickle of mourners for Mrs. Gandhi passed through the security cordon of rifle-carrying soldiers, was the faintest of reminders of the huge outpouring of people who had paid homage to the first Gandhi, whom the world called Mahatma, or "great soul."

There was a more vivid flashback in the killing of Sikhs by enraged Hindus after police and that Mrs. Gandhi, India's prime minister for 15 of the last 18 years, had been shot by thread of religious conflict that has torn the subclesewhere in Mohandas Gandhi's later days. periodically for centuries. According to the history books it goes back to the first Moslem invasion of India, accompain the conflict between Hindus and Sikhs on one side and Moslems on the other as the formerly British-ruled subcontinent was partitioned between predominantly Hindu India and overwhelmingly Moslem Pakistan on Aug. 15, 1947.

Gandhi, who had brought a measure of calm in some of the more troubled areas by the first of his famous factors.

Gandhi, who had brought a measure of caim in some of the more troubled areas by the first of his famous fasts for peace, was shot by a fanatical fellow Hindu who believed he was favoring Moslems.

Contemplating the low platform on which Mrs. Gandhi's ashes lay, surrounded by banks of marigold wreaths and garlands left by mourners, brought back grim memories of the religious warfare that followed partition.

The Sikhs were in the thick of the fighting then, as in recent troubled days, but as aggressors rather than as victims. It was common for Sikh bands to stop trains laden with refugees passing through Punjab bound for Pakistan and slaughter the Moslem passengers. On one train, a Moslem was hauled from the next compartment, stabbed with spears innumerable times and left for dead beside the tracks.

Striving of different groups for community identity is another.

There must have been equal horrors in the occurrences last week after Mrs. Gandhi's death, in which Sikhs were the victims.

Yet peeping through chinks in the modern facade are the ancient crenelated walls of crumbling stone, the medieval ancient crenelated walls of crumbling stone, the medieval ancient crenelated walls of crumbling stone, the medieval walls of crumbling stone, the medieval ancient crenelated walls of crumbling stone, the medieval walls of crumbling stone, the medieval ancient crenelated walls of crumbling stone, the medieval walls of crumbling stone, the medieval ancient crenelated walls of crumbling stone, the medieval ancient crenela two Sikh members of her bodygnard.

But the ensuing carnage, in which about 1,000 people, mostly Sikhs, are believed to have been killed, was only a recent days and those of 1947, there is a clear link in the city an indelible stamp.

Indians are convinced, rightly or wrongly, that the Reagan admir tration has little interest in New Delhi's future. They foresee that Washington, citing the Soviet pres-ence in Afghanistan, will go on arming Pakistan, to India's disadvantage, with newer and newer tools of war. "Rajiv is not weighted down by the perceptions of the past," said N.C. Menon, a former Indian correspondent in the United States who is now editor of The Hindustan Times. "He is not ideologically motivated," he added.

A Western diplomat suggested that Mr. Gandhi, not unlike other Indians of his generation, has finally shed a reflexive anti-Americanism and now feels more at home with American thinking and culture. Many Indians are now educated in the United States and have family members there.

"Rajiv has had a lot of personal contact with the West," another diplomat added. "He may be less prone to suspicion."

Should Mr. Gandhi carry his agmatic, unemotional style into his international role, diplomats and commentators say, this could have implications for the group of nations calling themselves the Non-aligned Movement. Mr. Gandhi now takes over his mother's role as head of that organization.

More Help for the Hungry

Public response to recent documentaries on the Ethiopian famine makes one wonder whether Western governments are not too supine in their aid programs. Help for the poorest countries - those not advanced enough to be able to borrow on ordinary commercial terms in the markets - was once a priority. But many rich governments have put such help on the back burner.

It is supposed that public support for aid has dwindled. Austerity at home, growing doubt about the efficacity of aid, and realization that many of the governments to which it is given are politically unsavory are offered as reasons. But news of the Ethiopian famine has occasioned a massive popular reaction, despite the distasteful nature of the Marxist regime struggling to maintain power in that unfortunate land. Perhaps electorates are less averse to giving aid than the governments think.

There are two, contrasting, arguments for giving aid. One bases itself on the concept of enlightened self-interest — what the report by Willy Brandt and his associates in 1980 called "the mutuality of interests" between donors and recipients. By giving aid, we are doing ourselves material good in the long run. The other argument is that, quite simply, it is right for the rich to help the poor.

We suspect that the Brandt Commission made a psychological error here. The concept of enlightened self-interest often gets you nowhere. How can you persuade the Western voter, at a time of recession and budget stringency, that a dollar paid out to the Third World will create more employment for him than a dollar's worth of tax cuts or higher public expenditure at home? The assertion probably is not even true.

Encouraged by the concept of the selfish voter, a vast anti-aid profession has been born. Academic reputations are being founded on research into the inefficacity of aid. A new intellectualism ascribes the poverty of black Africa to disregard for the rules of the market system, which is at best a halftruth. In the face of this, governments are becoming adept at designing what Mr. Brandt called "alibis for inaction."

Of course some aid is wasted. The governments to which it is donated make many mistakes and are sometimes corrupt. But mistakes - we will not talk more of corruption - are not confined to the public and professional circles of the poor. Remember Concorde? The Edsel automobile?

We doubt if electorates necessarily fall for this sort of reasoning. They see starving children with swollen bellies and matchstick arms as just that, and not as pawns in some erudite thesis about how the poor should apply themselves to the economic principles appropriate to the rich. With a bit of courage. Western governments could rescue the concept of aid from the closet in which it is currently confined.

Voters are capable of taking the wider the more charitable - view if their leaders put it to them squarely. We believe that, even in this cynical age, Western governments could quickly persuade their constituents to support greater expenditure on aid if they concentrated more on the moral arguments, and less on justification through cost-benefit analysis.

There are many more Ethiopias in black Africa — Conrad's heart of darkness — and elsewhere. As Giles Merritt wrote on this page (Nov. 2), they need both emergency food supplies and financial grants and cheap loans to help their agriculture work better, and become more independent, in the long term. There is still plenty of work to do.

As 1985 begins, government will have four years to run in America, and two or so in many other rich countries. Is this not the moment when the Western donor countries should cash in on the current mood and raise the aid flow to the poorest countries from the present paltry level of - let us be exact -0.36 percent of their total annual income? Suppose we raised it to 0.46, then to 0.56 percent? Would anyone, except the recipients, notice the difference?

An Armistice Day Test of German Détente

B ERLIN — The clear and consistent message here in the eastern sector is that the government wants to continue gradual moves easing relations between the two Germanys and feels able to do so despite the fierce Soviet propaganda campaign against West Germany.

But the pace has definitely slowed. East German officials stress the need for a better climate between Moscow and Washington as an umbrella for their own efforts.

Western officials speculate that Moscow will not give East Berlin more room for maneuver until after the mammoth celebrations of the 40th anniversary of the end of World War II next May have firmly re-established that the geopolitical results of the war are not to be questioned.

That is going to be a crucial moment in East-West relations. It will make an enormous difference if it is possible for all the former belligerents, allies in East and West, enemies in Central Europe, to join in bonoring the dead and renewing the call for peace instead of disputing credit for victory. It will not be easy. The West celebrates Armistice Day on May 8, the Russians May 9; they did not agree on a single ceremony in 1945. They could now recognize both dates.

Meanwhile, none can deny that this country has become a European fact. One key element of the changes in Europe, often unnoticed in the West, is how much East Germany has grown in weight and importance in the Soviet bloc, almost parallel with the rise of the Federal Republic's influence in the Western alliance.

It has the strongest economy outside the Soviet Union, and the highest standard of living, well above that of the Russians. Officials are proud that it has developed its own electronics industry - not up to the standard in the West, they By Flora Lewis concede. But Moscow turned to East German high technology when the United States embar-goed parts for the big natural-gas pipeline. A crash program produced the goods. This capacity gave East Berlin some leverage on the new 15-year trade agreement between the two.

There is also a parallel foreign policy dilemma here, but with key differences. The existence of the Communist regime, as well as of the state, relies now on Moscow's implacable will. East Germany cannot get very far out of line, and its leaders do not want to.

It will make a big difference if all the former belligerents can join in honoring the dead.

But they need the enormous advantages they get from West Germany's special indulgences to induce their people to work for the regime, if not to support it. West Germany provides all sorts of economic benefits, direct and indirect; because it feels a responsibility to maintain human contacts across the Berlin Wall and wants to keep alive a hope of future German unity.

East German leaders are determined to keep the separate state, established by Moscow. They are torn when Western leftists talk of neutralism or seeking "independence" from America. There is a natural temptation to cheer whatever might weaken the rival Western alliance. But there is also fear of an undertow against the foundations of their own fragile state.

That explains the reversal of the initial East German policy toward German history. At first there was a Stalinist stand that everything before the new state was bad and that "proletarian internationalism," which meant first allegiance to Moscow, must replace German nationalism. Then there was a period when feeling German was all right, as long as all the heroes were German Communists.

Now, the "good parts" of the long past are being revived and ostentatiously honored as the legitimate hentage of East Germany, the histories of Prussia and Saxony as well as of Germany as a whole. That is why Frederick the Great sits on his bronze horse on Unter den Linden again, a few hundred yards from where a monument to Stalin once stood, and why millions are being spent on restoring magnificent old cathedrals and palaces. Moscow is not pleased.

But the need for identity also explains the special understanding with the dominant Protestant church, restrained but allowed to function as the only institution independent of the Commu-

A slow evolution is taking place. There are conflicting tugs. The "German question," with its intricate and provocative details, will remain at the heart of Europe's problems for a long time.

W ASHINGTON — It is widely believed that the impasse in arms-control negotiations brought on by the Russians' walkout requires some major pre-emptive concessions on America's part to get them back to the table. I do not share this view. Any major concession could unnec-essarily delay the resumption of negotiations. There are several reasons why I believe that the Russians will return to the negotiating table. First, there are clear indications that a growing number of Soviet officials share the American desire to reduce the risk of nuclear war, and see reductions of nuclear arsenals as a way to do it.

Second, the Reagan administration's success at modernizing U.S. forces after a decade of neglect has not gone unnoticed in Moscow. The Russians have a healthy respect for U.S. technological potential and would like to slow it down.

Third, the Russians undoubtedly recognize that their attempt to portray their advantage in Europe as fair has not worked. They must know that in view of their roughly six-to-one nuclear advantage, the United States and its allies will not remove the

too ambitious. If our proposal would have required the Russians to give up more destructive capability than the United States, it is because they contimued to build during the 1970s while we stood relatively still. They built up a three-to-one advantage over us in ICBM warheads, the most destabilizing weapons. It is that imbalance that contributes most to undermining stability in times of crisis, and makes nuclear war more likely. It is not generally acknowledged that U.S. negotiators took a series of important initiatives in 1983 that altered the original proposal to meet the Russians' concern that we were do not work.

Finally, once the U.S. presidential election is over the Russians will have no reason to believe that by staying away from the talks they might profit from the domestic debates in the United States. Further, as they pon-der Foreign Minister Andrei A. reducing the size of nuclear arsenals. The original U.S. proposal in the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks, or START, called on both sides to reduce the number of strategic ballistic missiles by one-half, and the warheads on these missiles by one-third. Critics, however, cannot have it both ways: They cannot claim that the Reagan administration proposed too little and that the proposal was too demanding on their ICBM force. By making changes in our proposal, by negotiating seriously and flexibly and never with a take-it-or-leave-it attitude, we got the negotiations going in earnest. Considerable progress was made toward agreement. Unfortunately, just a year ago the Russians decided to walk out of the intermediate nuclear force talks because of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's deployment of intermediate-range missiles in Europe to counter the Russians' huge new SS-20 threat. Their failure this past February to agree to our proposal to resume START was all the more unfortunate in view of our October 1983 offer to explore trade-offs between U.S. forces of concern to them and Soviet forces of concern to us.

We offered to trade reductions in our advantage in cruise missiles for a reduction in their advantage in ICBMs. These trade-offs could mark a turning point in negotiations.

My experience tells me that our impatience would only encourage the Russians to seek further concessions. They are 11th-hour negotiators: They would postpone to the bitter end any serious discussions in the hope of getting us to give in. And we have learned that one-sided restraints

Mr. Shultz's Impractical Doctrine

By Philip Geyelin

WASHINGTON — Though it took a bit of doing to haul Vice President George Bush aboard and to straighten out some confusion in President Reagan's first comments. the Shultz Doctrine on counterterrorism has been proclaimed to be administration policy.

With Mr. Shultz, it appears to approach the level of a fierce fixation. Just before leaving for Indira Gandhi's funeral he was actually shouting his insistence that Americans "wake up" to terrorism as "an international form of warfare ... directed largely against us and our way of life."

The secretary of state wants Americans to realize that counterterrorism requires the use of "overt power," which means "active prevention, pre-emption and retaliation." It means a potential for loss of life of some of our fighting men and the loss of life of some innocent people." Events are working strongly in support of public consciousness-raising, even without Mr. Shultz's wakeup call. The assassination of Mrs. Gandhi competes for news attention with a growing case in the Italian court against Bulgaria and, by impli-cation, the Soviet Union for the attempt on the life of Pope John Paul II. Awareness of a growing menace, on a global scale, is not the problem.

The problem remains what to do about it. And the real question is how the American public, aroused by the administration's demands for public understanding, will respond when it comes to understand not only the enormous complexity but the high level of hypocrisy in the moral and strategic necessity of action" that Mr. Shultz would have us accept. On the face of it, Mr. Shultz made an appealing case in his speech last week at a New York City synagogue. His aim is nothing less than to "put an end to violent attacks against innocent people." You have only to consider the surge of public pride that followed the bungled rescue of the crew of the Mayaguez to know that this plays to an American mind-set — a relish for swift and relatively cost-free shows of force.

But Mr. Shultz is not offering an occasional uplift. He is asking for a "broad public consensus" on a pro-gram over which the public will exercise no control. He wants a blank check for any military action.

But the public and Congress are going to be asking questions. Mr. Shultz says the United States has the "capability and the techniques to use power to fight the war against terrorism." But he does not say why these skills were not put into practice in Lebanon. The president has told us: Simply, not enough was known about the location of the targets or the danger to innocent civilians to respond.

Mr. Shultz says we will be selective so as to avoid "a cycle of escalating violence beyond our control." Yet that is exactly what leading authorities predict will happen as a conse-

U.S. government.

The secretary promises he will not allow the counterterrorism effort "to descend to the level of barbarism that terrorism represents." But the evi-dence of a Bulgarian connection to the attempt to kill the pope is matched by growing evidence of a CIA connection with a campaign of terrorism by the counterrevolutionary forces in Nicaragua.

I am not suggesting that incitement to assassinate Sandmists is of the same magnitude as a Soviet plot to assassinate the pope. But the princi-ple is not so different. The Shultz Doctrine is asking Americans to accept the practice of fighting fire with fire. We would be saying to terrorists and to states that support terrorism: If you will not be more like us in the way you seek to advance your interests, we will be more like you.

I wish I had a prescription to go with this diagnosis of what strikes me quence of any counterterrorism mea-sures that bear the fingerprints of the approach to terrorism. But nobody really does; even the most surgical. Enterboe-type operations have not rid Israel of terrorism's scourge.

What does seem safe to say is that there is no sweeping, dogmatic, this-is-it remedy available. Yet that is precisely what Mr. Shultz is putting forth. We cannot allow ourselves to forth. "We cannot anow ourselves to become the Hamlet of nations," he says. He is right. Hamlet's hand-wringing had to do with suicide. If Mr. Shultz wants a Shakespear-ian metaphor, he would be closer to the hard question with Macbeth, whose handwringing had to do with incremental homicide. Macbeth, as it turned out, had the right doubts: "If twere done when 'tis done, then 'twere well it were done quickly."

That same "if" is what makes counterterrorism as proposed by Mr. Shultz a wonder-drug approach to a sickness that can only be dealt with by long and painful treatment. by long and painful treatment.

Obscurantism is safe in the pen of William F. Buckley Jr. ("Why Can't the Resistance Be Helped in Nicaragua," Oct. 26). No one ever expected that the U.S.-backed "contras" would feel squeamish about using assassination to overthrow the Sandinists. Many of the contras are mercenaries or former Somoza National Guardsmen and it is plain that the CIA was telling them what they wanted to hear. The line, first used by the AFL-CIO's Lane Kirkland to question Mr. Hart's "new ideas" theme, was suggested to Mr. Mondale by Bob Beckel, his campaign manager, and was delivered perfectly.

Worst political tactic: Come back on stage, Fritz. You get this one, too, for the abortive move to dump Charles Manatt and bring in Bert Lance as Democratic national chairman on the eve of the Democratic convention. It was an effort that offended everyone, including the Southerners it was supposed to please, and left even loyalists won-

And Mr. Mondale and Mr. Hart arguing, during the New York primary, about who was most committed to moving the U.S. Embassy in Israel to Jerusalen.

Best press secretary: In a year when White House aides turned out the lights on cameramen and stiff-armed would-be questioners, and Mr. Mondale's handlers picked over the newspapers for items they could argue about, and both vetoed scores of journalists for the panel on the first debate, one person stood out in shining contrast: Mr. Hart's press secretary, Kathy Bushkin.

By Sheridan Morley International Herold Tribune

ONDON -- The National Theatre currently offers the best comic performance in town: Michael Kitchen, playing a Polish cabin steward mysteriously called Murphy and so drunk that he rolls while the ship is in harbor. Later, wishing to inspire confidence during a storm, he announces, "Go to your panic stations, no lifeboats," instead of "Go to your lifeboat stations, no panic.

He is almost able to save this work, "Rough Crossing," which but for him would have taken down with it such distinguished hands as Tom Stoppard, Peter Wood, André Prévin, John Standing, Sheila Gish and Robin Bailey.

What has happened takes a little explaining: Early in the 1920s, Ferene Molnar wrote a comedy called "Play at the Castle" about a group of actors and dramatists trying to rescue a script and their private lives from chaos. That was, in 1928, turned by P. G. Wodehouse into "The Play's the Thing," a frequently revived play still set on dry land. Now, for the National, Stoppard has gone back to the original and with Previn's help has converted it into a shipboard musical comedy somewhere between Pirandello and "Dames at Sea."

Classic farce has returned to the Shaftesbury with Ray Cooney's "Two Into One," which also happens to contain the second-funniest comic performance in town, that of Michael Williams as a bemused parliamentary private secretary ordered by his MP (Donald Sinden) to organize a clandestine afternoon in a London hotel. > The new musical "Chess," which joins Tim Rice and the pop group ABBA, was given a one-night premiere last week in a concert performance at the Barbican. It has a very strong score (vastly stronger than "Blondel") but not a lot else going for it. The plot synopsis in the program came as another sharp re-minder that Rice, although an in-telligent and talented lyricist, is not actually a dramatic writer, and they will need an expert playwright and a very strong director if they are to make the transition from concert

A percussive score of tremendous confidence is highlighted by a couple of numbers — "I Know Him So Well" and "Pity the Child" — clearly destined for the charts. Coleman became diseachanted with having to close his eyes in saloons and with low union scales. He raised his price and found fewer takes. He lowered his profile. In the 70s he retreated to read, think and write music. He learned trumpet and violin, and people said he could not play a scale on them

Toward the end of the decade he appeared, as his Harmolodic system began to influence young rock musicians. Our objective was to make Pan Am Clipper® Class simply the best in the business.

To do this we set about totally redesigning it. In fact little of the old Clipper Class remains.

No longer is there, as with other airlines, one separate business cabin. The new Clipper Class has three. We thought that would give you more privacy.

Out With The Old, In With The New.

Then we threw out the eight-across seating. Now it's just six. And, unlike other major transatlantic carriers, they're individual seats purpose-built for business class.

Out too go the overhead bins. Now Superbin comes to the rescue of travellers with large hand luggage. Six times bigger, these new bins can take suitcases standing or garment bags laying flat.

movie buffs needn't worry, in its place is a brand new Sony video system.

However, Clipper doesn't just look better, it sounds better too, with the addition of new electronic headsets. So wherever you sit you'll have the best seat in the house.

A New Restaurant At 35,000 Ft.

When it's time for dining there's a whole new experience for you to enjoy. Separate courses served on real china. It's like stepping back in time to the gracious days of flying.

But the benefits of travelling Pan Am Clipper Class aren't all aboard the 747.

On arrival at the airport you go straight to your own separate check-in.

Speed Above The Traffic In A Free Pan Am Helicopter.

If you're going to New York there's a free helicopter from JFK to East 60th Street, Wall Street or Newark Airport. No other airline has its own helicopter service.

Meeting our evening New York flight from Heathrow is a free limousine to chauffeur you from JFK to your hotel in Manhattan.

Both of these services leave from the same terminal, the one that you arrive at, our very own Pan Am Worldport®

Be sure to book one of them when you make your reservation.

Europe And America Under One Roof.

From Worldport you can also catch Pan Am flights all over America.

It is the only terminal to have both international and internal U.S. flights all under the one roof.

Next time you fly to the States, fly Pan Am. After all, who else offers you, for the price of a business class ticket, a million dollar experience?

For information and reservations, call your Travel Agent or the nearest Pan Am office.

The film went the same way. Out. But Pan Am. You Can't Beat The Experience.

"People who need to see the big picture need a terminal system that can show it to them."

INTRODUCING THE ITT 9000 SERIES OF PRODUCTS.

In today's clutter of computergenerated data, it's understandable if business people sometimes lose sight of their business.

Fortunately, keeping your eye on the big picture has just become a good deal easier. With the new 9000 series of data terminal products from ITT Courier.

Together, working as systems, these innovative products make managing data a good deal more manageable.

They turn even the most complex numbers and information into easily-followed business graphics and displays.

Take, for example, the ITT

9236 color display terminal.

It lets you 'paint' in any of seven different colors, in any part of the screen you want. It even gives you a choice of screen sizes.

With little difficulty, you can customize your charts, graphs and color-coded tables.

And the 9236 lets you switch from one application to another. Without losing data in the process.

Moreover, you can flip between applications with a simple, single keystroke.

Of course, if you prefer a monochrome display, there's our versatile 9230.

INTERNATIONAL MANAGER

European Firms Converted By Guru of Quality Control

By SHERRY BUCHANAN

ENEVA — The new management buzz word that has reached European shores from Florida is "quality control." Its main converts are European subsidiaries of major U.S. computer companies that are hoping that quality control will save them money and maintain, or increase, their market share in an increasingly competitive envi-

The guru of this old concept made new is Philip Crosbie, Florida-based management consultant and the author of a book called "Quality is Free." Mr. Crosbie's message is that it doesn't cost anything to do things right the first time but everything you have to touch twice costs money.

Although each corporation has a slightly different interpretation of quality control, it basically examines each step of a It doesn't cost company's function in search anything to do of less expensive and more efficient ways to operate.

Equipment Corp. Europe are spreading the new religion through their managerial ranks. To symbolize its commitment to the concept, Hewlett-Packard has hung bright blue and white banners with the quality-process anagram in its Geneva head-quarters. Honeywell Europe is running internal quality colleges. Digital Equipment's top European executive, Pier-Carlo Falotti, has produced a "mind map," a colorful illustration that depicts the primary goal of customer satisfaction and the various ways to achieve and maintain it.

Outsity control has long been applied in manufacturing. Now

Quality control has long been applied in manufacturing. Now these companies have decided to apply it to every aspect of day-to-day business, including how bosses can deal effectively with their employees. "The reason it was being done in manufacturing is because people believed it was the only place you could measure its results," says Franz Nawratil, HP's director of marketing in Europe.

HE companies have targeted several areas, including accounts receivable and on-time product delivery, where they believe that quality control will save them money. Digital Equipment, for instance, decided that one of its main problems was the telephone: that having too many telephone numbers in one city was confusing to customers, and that having inadequate customer backup service by telephone was even more confusing.

"We plan to put in a customer-communications specialist as a new job," says Lutz Reuter, director of sales-management development at Digital Equipment Europe. "But we believe that 85 percent of the problem can be solved by the first-line managers

According to Mr. Nawratil, Hewlett Packard already has saved $400 million in accounts receivable over five years as a result of greater quality commitment. HP was having problems collecting its money on time, and with the recession in the United States, it would have been plausible for HP accountants to assume that customers were putting off paying bills for as long as possible to weather the recession.

"The standard reaction would have been to collect the money Chicago-style and send people out with machine guns," says Mr. Nawratil. But managers analyzed their internal billing process and found it was inefficient. "The problem was that we were sending them the wrong bill," says Mr. Nawratil. "And that was taking up alot of time."

There is no question that the Japanese emphasis on quality control has given European subsidiaries of U.S. companies the incentive to take a second look at quality control. "The Japanese (Continued on Page 13, Col. 1)

Oil Prices Are Cut Again

Texaco Reduces Crude by $1

NEW YORK - Oil prices slipped again Tuesday as Texaco Inc. cut. its posted price for the most important U.S. crude by $1 a barrel and Canada lowered the price of its light-crude exports by $1.33 a barrel.

Algeria, a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, reduced the price of its condensate — a liquid hydrocar-bon that can be refined into homeheating oil and gasoline — by 50 cents, to $26.50 a barrel, effective Nov. 1, the Oil Buyers' Guide in Lakewood, New Jersey, said. Con-densate is not covered by OPEC pricing policy.

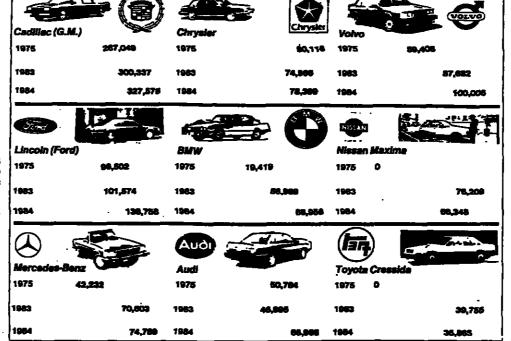

Analysts said the latest price breaks could undermine OPEC's Nov. I agreement to prop up crumbling of the country of the count bling oil prices by cutting produc-tion by 1.5 million barrels a day to erase the global oil surplus. OPEC acted after Norway, Britain and Nigeria, an OPEC member, had cut their oil prices.

Texaco, the third largest U.S. oil company, lowered the price that it will pay for West Texas intermedi-- the benchmark domestic crude — by $1, to $29 a barrel.

West Texas intermediate should sell for $1 more than OPEC's $29 benchmark price for a 42-gallon barrel of Saudi Arabian light crude. Texaco followed the lead of Mobil Corp., Phillips Petroleum Co., Diamond Shamrock Co., Citgo Pe-troleum and Crown Central Petroleum Co., which have dropped their posted prices for West Texas intermediate over the past two weeks. Texaco also reduced its posted prices for six other high-quality U.S. crudes by up to $1.35 a barrel, in a trend that has accelerated since U.S. refiners have been under which is unprofitable to refine be-

U.S. Automakers Wake Up to Threat By Europe Firms in Luxury-Car Field

By John Holusha New York Times Service

DETROIT - For almost two decades, European tomakers have nibbled away at the highly profitable U.S. luxury-car market with hardly any response from the Big Three: General Motors Corp., Chrysler Corp. and Ford Motor Co.

Stressing high performance and engineering advances, the Europeans are fielding such makes as the Mercedes-Benz, Volvo, Audi, BMW and Saab to do battle with Detroit's traditional view of the luxury car: a big, hishly appointed highway cruiser with a large engine, like the Cadillac and Lincoln. The Japanese have also joined the fray, exporting Toyota Motor Co.'s Cressida and Nissan Motor Co.'s Maxima,

The imports are increasing their market share at a time when huxury models of all kinds have become more popular, accounting for about 10 percent of total sales this year.

"We didn't recognize as early as some other parts of the world that the market intense pressure to trim their post-ed prices for domestic light crude, wanted in addition to the traditional elements of comfort, image and prestige," said John O. Gretten-berger, the general manager of Cadillac. Now, the domestic manufacturers are preparing to strike back and they plan to use European models of their own in the counterattack.

There appear to be many definitions of a luxury car but many analysts say that at a minimum, a car must sell for more than $15,000 to qualify.

A conservative view of the luxury market is contained in figures compiled by Cadillac, showing that the import share of the U.S. market for expensive cars has grown to 19 percent so far this year from 5.7

less than their overall share of the U.S. market, which is about 23 percent. But luxury cars are where the big profits are. Domestic manufacturers clear more than $5,000 each on their highest priced models, compared a few hundred dollars on base compacts.

British Banks Cut Loan Rate By Half Point

LONDON - Britain's major panks cut their base lending rates half a percentage point to 10 per-cent Tuesday, their fourth reduction in interest rates since summer. The cuts were prompted by in-creased confidence in the British pound after the Bank of England

British money supply in the four weeks to mid-October. Barclays Bank PLC was the first to announce the reduction. It was quickly followed by Britain's three other biggest banks, National Westminster Bank PLC, Lloyds Bank PLC and Midland Bank PLC.

anounced a drop Tuesday in the

The last three reductions, each of a percentage point, occurred in July and August.

The base lending rate is the benchmark on which banks peg all their lending rates. The British base usually is one percentage point lower than the interest charged to

The cuts mean lower borrowing charges for both industry and personal customers. They also pressure building societies, the British equivalent of savings and loan associations to reduce their measurements. sociations, to reduce their mort-gage rates, which are currently be-tween 12.75 percent and 13 percent A spokesman for the Building

Societies Association who asked not to be identified said the reduced bank rates will probably prompt "a reduction in building society rates in the near future."

The Barclays decision followed an announcement Monday by the Bank of England that it was reducing the rate it sets for intervention short term money markets by half a percentage point.

Barclays and Lloyds also brought down their interest rate on deposit accounts from 7.25 percent to 6.75 percent, National Westminster dropped the same rate from 7.5 percent to 6.75 percent while at Midland, it fell from 7.25 percent to 6.5 percent.

Tuesday's reduction follows a softening of interest rates in the United States and a consequent im-provement in the British pound as well as a slowdown in the expansion of the money supply in Brit-clearing houses since Aug. 17, when base lending rates were cut to 10.5 percent from 11 percent. In a double increase in July, base rates in-creased to 12 percent from 9.25

Barclays announced its decision within minutes of confirmation from the Bank of England that growth of M-3, the broadest measure of the money supply, had slowed in October.

Citing provisional figures, the Bank of England reported that the M-3 had expanded from 0.25 percent to 0.5 percent last month.

West German Industry Orders Remain Stable

BONN — Incoming orders

for the manufacturing industry in West Germany, seasonally adjusted, were unchanged in September after rising 1 percent in August, the economics minis-try said Tuesday in a preliminary report.

Domestic orders fell 2 percent in September, while orders from abroad rose I percent. Overall orders were 6.1 percent higher than a year earlier. Separately, the Federal Statistics Office said West Germany's cost of living index rose 0.6 percent in October from September and was 2.1 percent higher than a year earlier. In September, the index rose 0.1 percent from August. Another set of economic figures from the Association of Cooperative Banks forecast a 3percent growth in the West German economy next year after 2.5-percent growth in 1984. The forecast is one of the most optimistic to date.

Fed's Vice Chairman Hints at Easier Money

chairman of the U.S. Federal Reserve Board strongly hinted Tues-day that the Fed is prepared to He adopt a somewhat easier money policy in order to sustain the U.S.

Mr. Martin's remarks, just hours before a closed meeting of the WUS. Rates Fall Fed's policy-making Open Market Committee, appeared to confirm financial market expectations that the Fed will supply more money to the economy in a bid to cut interest rates and revive an expansion that has lagged in recent weeks.

A softer trend in short-term U.S. interest rates has weakened the dollar on exchange markets in recent days.
Mr. Martin said the Fed has added reserves to the banking system

Dollar Makes Gains in Europe The Associated Press

LONDON — The dollar fell in Japan but gained ground in some places in Europe later Tuesday to halt a weeklong slide. Activity was light as traders awaited results from the U.S. presidential and congressional elections.

U.S. money markets were closed Tuesday, but interest rates had tumbled Monday amid growing expectations that the U.S. Federal Reserve Board would move soon to accommodate even lower interest rates. The Fed's policy-making arm meets Wednesday.

As the trading day began, the dollar fell to 241.875 yen in Tokyo from 243.475 yen late Mon-day. In late trading, the dollar weakened in Frankfurt to 2.9490 Deutsche marks from 2.9495 on Monday. In Paris the dollar gained to 9.054 francs from 9.000 the day before, while in London the pound slipped to $1.2618 from $1.2648.

Short-term interest rates fell sharply Monday amid wide speculation by traders and economists that the Federal Reserve had moved to ease monetary policy and encourage lower interest rates.

The drop in short-term rates which amounted to more than a quarter of a percentage point for onistanding securities, spilled over into the note and bond markets, where yields fell modestly for Treasury, corporate and tax-exempt is-

But the largest declines were in the short-term market, where rates on new Treasury bills fell more than half a percentage point from last week's auctions, with the threemonth issue averaging 8.82 percent, down from 9.38 percent, and six-mouth bills at 9.07 percent, down from 9.59 percent.

The catalyst for the sharp decline in short-term rates was a surprising move by the Federal Reserve to add reserves temporarily to the banking system through three-day purchases of securities. Since the overnight rate for bank loans in the federal funds market was already lower than expected at about 93 percent, traders quickly concluded that the Fed was signaling a desire to make bank reserves more plentiful, thereby encouraging a lower

"The Fed caught the market a little by surprise because every-body figured there would be no move until after Wednesday's FOMC meeting," one trader said, referring to the meeting of mone-tary policy officials on the Federal Open Market Committee.

HONG KONG - At a time of full employment in Hong Kong the British colony's textile industry is suddenly facing an acute labor shortage. Recent changes in U.S. law virtually prohibit knitwear manufacturers here from using cheap labor across the border in Hong Kong is the world's largest garment and textile exporter, with the United States buying 45 per-cent of its overall exports and more than a third of its textile and germent exports.

Last year Hong Kong exported 3 billion Hong Kong dollars ($383.6 million) worth of sweaters to the United States alone.

A total of 300,000 workers are employed in Hong Kong's garment cent. factories, but in 1980 local manufacturers began using unskilled Chinese workers in nearby Guangdong province to prepare knitted sections for assembly in Hong Kong. An estimated 100,000 mainland workers now make knitted panels for Hong Kong garment

The new rules announced on Aug. 3 by the Reagan administration bar Hong Kong from using "Made in Hong Kong" labels if a substantial part of the garment was made outside the territory. The new rules apply to all garments within the Multi-Fiber Arrangement, which governs much of the world's trade in textiles and apparel.

The U.S. move follows pressure on the administration by American textile makers anxious to reduce cheap imports, particularly from China and the Far East. China is currently the fourth largest supplier of cloth to the United States.

Shipments of knitwear composed of China-made panels was to Kong textile companies fear losses of 2.3 billion dollars next year.

Hong Kong has protested against the rules to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade in Geneva, but without success. Now the colony's knitwear makers are trying to move knitting business back from China to Hong Kong. But the director of the Wah Fung knitting factory. Wong Sung-Chuen, says it will take Hong Kong up to three years for local knitting operations to make up the shortfall caused by the U.S. rules.

About 40,000 Hong Kong workers are now in the panel-knitting part of the industry, but the cost of their labor is 100 to 200 dollars a day, or about 300 percent higher than their Chinese counterparts. In addition, the price of knitting machines has recently risen by 20 per-old knitting factories in the colony's New Territories and one source in the industry admitted that a few companies have cheated by telling customs officials that panels knitted in China were made in the reopened factories.

The U.S. rules have also put increased pressure on the local labor cent. force, of whom only 3.4 percent in the second quarter of this year were unemployed. There have been suggestions of bringing workers from mainland China into the colony.

At the end of last month, a local businessmen and a legislative councillor, Allen Lee, proposed in a public debate that the Hong Kong overnment work with Communist Chinese officials to establish a restricted industrial zone on the border, where mainland Chinese could

Warner Drop Merger Plan

The Associated Press NEW YORK --- Warner Communications Inc. and the two European companies that own Poly-gram Records Inc. said Tuesday that they have dropped plans to merge their recorded-music opera-

The companies said they were dropping the bid because of the prospect of a protracted court fight with the U.S. Federal Trade Commission, which opposes the merger.

The companies announced their decision in a joint statement re-leased in New York. Polygram is owned by NV Philips Glocilam-penfabricken of the Netherlands and Siemens AG of West Germa-

The companies had announced last year that they planned to merge their record operations, but the FTC voted in March of this year to oppose it because it might create a monopoly.

The government said Warner, the second largest U.S. distributor of records, tapes and other prerecorded music in 1983, has about 18.9 percent of the U.S. market, while Polygram has about 7.1 per-

The combination would have created a company larger than the current industry leader, the record unit of CBS Inc. The FTC challenged the merger in U.S. District Court in California. A federal judge refused in April to block the merger, but an appeals court agreed in September to block it pending a hearing on the case.

"This decision is a direct consequence of the opposition of the be transported daily to work in Federal Trade Commission to the proposed merger in the United States," the companies said in their

"Some countries are offended when you talk about quality commitments," says Tom Nesbitt of Honeywell Europe. "The Germans, for instance, estimate everything they do is already quality."

There are no real reward systems that the companies can offer to What is needed is individual commitments and a change in attitudes. The best reward system is public But commitments by senior recognition, says Franco Mariotti, management and internal quality president of HP Europe.

Some Argentine Debt Reported Downgraded

WASHINGTON - U.S. bank regulators have downgraded the credit rating of some Argentine debt in a move designed to main-tain pressure on Buenos Aires to stick to economic reforms agreed upon with the International Mone-tary Fund, U.S. officials say.

But the decision also was carefully crafted so as not to undermine current talks between Argentina and commercial banks on a $20 billion financing package, said the officials, who asked not to be

"It was a unique way of blending the carrot and the stick," one official familiar with the negotiations said Monday.

The officials did not specify how much of Argentina's foreign debt, estimated at about $45 billion, was downgraded to the "substandard" credit rating on Friday. A "sub-standard" credit rating does not force banks to set aside reserves but sounds an alarm bell about the quality of loans to Argentina.

The decision was made by the Inter-Agency Country Exposure

The committee meets in secret three times a year to review the quality of foreign loans. Its decisions are communicated directly to commercial banks and not usually made public, the officials said.

They also said Argentina's ef-forts to comply with IMF reforms and its recent payments of some overdue interest enabled the regulators to set aside a tentative decision reached last month to downgrade all the country's loans.

Bernardo Grinspun, said creditor banks would not downgrade the country's credit rating to substandard, Reuters reported from Bue-nos Aires. The "loans have a rating as 'other transfer risks' which had been in force since 1982-83," he

U.S. Firms Tackle Luxury Car Sector

The success of the imports reflects a change in buyers' attitudes. Luxury cars are not as ostentatious as they used to be," said Bennett E. Bidwell, executive vice president for marketing at Chrysler. "A guy who buys a Mercedes-Benz can rationalize it in many ways. He's not just an ostentatious jerk."

An even more serious problem facing U.S. auto companies is the preference that younger buyers have shown for the high-priced imports over what executives here refer to as "traditional" luxury cars.

The imports are being bought by the baby boomers who are now in their late 30s and early 40s," said Thomas O'Grady of Chase Econometrics. By comparison, peop buying full-size Cadillac and Lin coln models are typically in the mid-to-late 50s, according to indu try executives.

SHE PICKED ME UP, AND TOOK ME TO HER HOME

DEREK BLORE is an up-and-coming figure in British politics, no doubt about that. As Member of Parliament for Whitbridge East he is prominent in the loyal opposition, which he serves in the shadow cabinet, and has high hopes of becoming even more prominent after the forthcoming election, which his party stands an excellent chance of winning. His private life seems to be similarly exemplary; he has a beautiful, attentive wife, two handsome children, he knows good food and wine and he has a highly developed taste for the fiction of W. Somerset Maugham.

But he has an even more highly developed taste for boots and canes and other instruments of pleasure—a taste, that is, for "something kinky." In the guise of Billy Bunter he regularly visits the shabby little flat inhabited by Bernadette Woolley, a "quite amazingly dim" prostitute who caters, however unenthudim" prostutute who caters, nowever unenthusiastically, to his yen to be flogged just as he was back in his heavenly days at school. For these merry occasions Biore Burnter wears "shorts, a gray-flannel shirt, a school tie and a boy's cap"; Bernadette is clad in "boots, a leather bodice, a short black scholar's gown and an academical square," and nunishes her and an academical square," and punishes her naughty pupil with a cane, which soon enough brings him to "the final revolting little conclu-

Thus the scene is quickly set for "Scandal." A. N. Wilson's exceedingly funny novel about sex and politics, power and publicity, faith and betrayal. At the outset the one certainty is that Derek Blore is going to get himself into a fat lot of trouble; the pleasure for the reader lies in following the labyrinthine path along which Wilson takes him there, a path strewn not so much with corpses—though there are a couple of those—as with the dashed hopes of people to whom life has turned out to be not quite as generous as they had hoped it would.

Accompanying Biore on this fateful journey is a cast of many characters, each of them entirely and amusingly believable. His wife, Priscilla, is a peach: a lovely aristocrat who has persuaded herself that "being kind was her function in life, her avocation," but whose kindness is of the killing variety. From time to time Priscilla slips (kindly) into bed with Feathers, an alcoholic journalist ("the carefulness of his gait suggested a man who might be asked to give a urine specimen") who rouses from his stupor long enough to commit an act of exquisite loathsomeness. All of these people get into various kinds of trouble with each other and with others as well, especially when Bernadette Woolley gets her-self married to a Russian dancer, Juri Kutuzov, a homosexual who is "congenitally indiscreet, inefficient, lazy and promiscuous." Once this happens one thing leads quite inexorably to another, and Derek Blore suddenly finds himself meeting with a fellow from the Russian embassy, "the Professor," who has pictures and tape recordings and an offer Blore cannot refuse: "In pious mood, (Blore) genuinely believed that it was patriotism that had led him to enter political life. He had discovered that he loved power more: power and position. Besides, as he had reasoned after his colloquy with the Professor, there would be no honorable way out now. They would not let him fade obscure ly from the scene. If they could not have the high prize of an agent in the Cabinet, they night prize of an agent in the Cannet, they could make him pay for it, by making certain that the story received the most lurid covering in the popular press. A resignation could never be effected in the popular press.

Fool that he is. Blore believes he can have it all; wise fellow that he is. Wilson knows full well he cannot, and leads him forthwith to the slaughter. This is no pleasure trip for Blore, but it's a lark for the reader. "Scandal" is delicious iy witty, Wilson's prose is mercilessly tart, and his eye for human frailties is unsparing yet, kind. Among his many fine books, "Scandal" ranks with "The Sweets of Pimlico" as the very

The warning came at 30-30 in the set's second game after a second close call. McEnroe protested in vain that a service return by Wilander, which appeared to hit the line, was not called out.

The reigning Wimbledon and U.S. Open champion, who improved his 1984 record to 75-2 and evened his head-to-head mark to 3against Wilander in Monday's final, had struggled in earlier matches here.

"I'm a little surprised, but I felt a lot better as the week went on," said the left-hander, who took a five-week layoff because of a sore arm after winning a tournament in San Francisco Sept. 24. "It takes a little time."

McEnroe's only setbacks this year came in the French Open final last June, when Ivan Lendl rallied to win in five sets, and in the first round of the ATP championships last August, when Vijay Amritraj of India upset him.

Budd to Forgo Meet in South Africa

United Press International CAPE TOWN - Zola Budd will not run at a track meet Saturday, officials here said Tuesday, fueling speculation that she is reconsider-ing her decision to quit international athletics. Nelis Swart, secretary of the Stellenbosch University Athletics Union, said Budd would not be in action at the school Saturday. "She must have had a rethink on her future," Swart said, Budd announced last week she would not return to Britain to resume her career. But subsequent reports said she was weighing an offer from a sports shoe company to commute to overseas meets while staying based in South Africa. She also indicated she might run in the mile at Stellenbosch.

By running competitively in South Africa, the 18-year-old Budd would be outlawed from international events because of a world track federation ban on the country stemming from its apartheid racial

Budd was the center of controversy earlier this year when Britain granted her citizenship because her father and grandfather were British nationals

She competed in the Los Angeles Olympic Games, where she was involved in a collision with American Mary Decker in the 3,000-meter

'Golden Boot' Rush Has a Fitting Partner

LONDON - ian Rush, recently acclaimed as Europe's golden boot, has been cast recently as a man

In Paris last week they came to praise him as 1984's king of the goal-scorers — the No. 1 marksman on a continent that boasts 18 million soccer players. In Milan and Rome they gnash teeth over the fact that he is the one star who resisted the lure of the lire. And in Lisbon on Wednesday, Benfica, having already suffered at his feet, wishes he would go away and stop coming back to knock them out of the European Cup.
Two images are bouncing from cover to cover of magazines wherever the game has meaning. There is the red-devil action shot of the goal-scorer extraordinaire and, following his sartorial elegance at the Paris award ceremony - Italiancut grey suit, slim white collar and perfectly blended tie - fashion editors are on his trail.

And both images are false. The first creates the illusion that all Rush needs is a ball and a net to score; the second that he fits selfassuredly into the celebrity world. In truth, Ian Rush is as dependent as any other striker on the team around him.

His finishing is instinctive: It can end a match the way a sniper can take a life, and after 128 goals in 214 games Rush is not exactly shy about his aim.

Yet off the field, despite the natty suit, the 23-year-old fumbles for vords and explanations of his art. He will say that if he is No. 1 it is because the team is No. 1 - and since Liverpool is champion of Europe, who can gainsay that?

Draw him deeper into conversa-tion, and the name Dalglish, Dalg-lish, Dalglish asserts itself. For it is the chemistry between Rush and Kenny Dalglish, partner and cre-ator of an overwhelming proportion of those goals, that turns Rush A really smart photographer

Yet without Dalglish, Rush would be Laurel without Hardy, Torvill without Dean — Reagan without Nancy. Why, even the North American Soccer League, for all its infuriating and self-destructive impulse to change the laws and interpretation of the game, can see that.

Dalglish, but by now in America, dammit, the older player would be recognized as the man who made the golden boot fit.

The link is almost telepathic. Rush will glide into space and Dalglish will stip the ball diagonal-ly to him; Rush moves as if he knows exactly where Dalglish will hit the pass, and Dalglish will slot the ball pitch-perfect into his

Separate them for a few weeks even months, as a recent injury requiring surgery to Rush's carti-lage did — and the two may function well enough, but not with that phenomenal consistency they share. Liverpool's relative struggle this season came while Rush was recuperating. On his second game back, in the European Cup against Benfica, he scored a hat trick, three goals of chilling simplicity, economy and apparent ease. Dalglish supplied the passes for two of Poor Benfica. It had worked on tactics to shut out Rush ever since he scored three times in the two legs of the same tournament last year. It ordered defenders to tie themselves to the bootlaces of the red devil. And that wasn't enough, because Benfica failed to sever the umbilical cord of understanding between Liverpool's deadly duo.

How you cut the cord nobody knows, since nobody can actually explain how it works.

Even the NASL system is rendered inadequate because there are times when Rush and Dalglish create goals for one another simply by moving as a decoy without touch ing the ball.

With Dalglish around, that is vir-tually assured. Rush is tall, slender and Welsh; Dalglish short, stocky and Scottish. Reports of his demise as a player have been more prematurely post-ed than those of Mark Twain, but he is 33 and knocks arrive more frequently and are more difficult to shrug off.

Last week, within hours of that Paris celebration for Rush, the Welshman appeared off form while Liverpool was knocked out from another cup in England. His runs came either too soon or too late: there was no delivery of the ball anticipating his movement — no Kenny Dalglish.

As it happens, Liverpool's fears that Dalglish might also require a cartilage operation happily dissolved with news that he has a cyst on the knee and is fit to resume. Meanwhile another young striker, Paul Walsh, who was purchased for over half a million pounds to be groomed as Dalglish's successor, has undergone surgery on the dreaded cartilages.

By this season's end he will be pressing his claim, and old golden boot Rush will be something of a mentor, no longer the pupil.

—The Toronto Maple Leafs made the mistake of breathing a little life into the Minnesota North Stars here Monday night. "We haven't been in a physical battle for a while and maybe that woke us up," said Coach Bill Mahoney after his North Stars rallied from a 3-0 deficit to a 5-3 National Hockey League victory in a game interrupt ed by 159 minutes in penalties. The North Stars, 0-6-2 in their previous eight games, started out sluggishly and trailed, 3-0, midway through the contest. The Maple Leafs outshot Minnesota, 19-10, in the first period, but the Stars grew stronger and finished with a 54-37 shot advantage.

"I thought the aggressive part of the game turned it around," said the winners' Dennis Maruk. "We used the body more. We may have worn them down,"

But Coach Dan Maloney said the Leafs gave the game away. "We came out playing well. Our goalie was doing his job, but then we gave them two goals in the third period, said Maloney. "They were absolute gifts. They weren't in the game until we gave it to them. We missed three breakaways. We really took some stupid penalties. I don't care who your're playing - you can't play two periods in the NHL and expect to win."

Isiah Thomas scored 33 points and had 11 assists, and Terry Tyler added 25 points, but it was Laimbeer in particular who seemed to rise to the occasion. "The major reason is their expectation of the money available This year the sport hit bottom. expectation of the money available its two flagship divisions, heavyweight and middleweight, were ally available."

Bert Zeldin, an NBC vice president for talent and program negotiations, agreed with Duva, but said that promoters also have to be realistic or they won't be on network television."

But even though Zeldin agreed ratings were down, he said that was true in all sports except baseball, because of the proliferation of sports on television. The road to the bottom was paved partly by circumstances beyon boxing's con-trol — college football's in effect becoming a free agent, and the Olympics. Arum accused television of being more interested in "Osh-

There seems little chance that the plethora of champions will end soon, despite lip service paid by the sanctioning bodies to title-unification fights.

Most of the problems — the fuzzy lines between promoters and managers, and promoters' options on fighters — were there when the sport was booming. So was the inherent danger of the sport, but there is now a growing opposition from doctors and others who find boxing morally reprehensible.

Meanwhile, there are reasons to believe that boxing is only taking a standing eight-count. As part of its cycle, there is now a new crop of Olympic heroes. The charismatic Cooney, no marter what one thinks of his ability or the quality of his opposition, stirs emotions. Donald Curry, the WBA and IBF welter-weight champion (two of three isn't bad), is nearing standom. Pryor and Camacho will soon return. And finally, there's a Big Fight on the horizon — Hagler vs. Hearns. Dr. Ferdie Pacheco, NBC's boxing adviser, takes the optimistic view that "boxing has been in a

Scarecrows Aren't Just for the Birds

By Lynne Ames

Nago Ken and Berry Reisdorff were bothered by birds that were eating fruit from the orchard near their house in Water Mill, New York. The Reisdorffs asked their daughter, Julie, for advice.

"I took a stick and draped my dad's favorite pale blue Levi work shirt over it," recalled Julie Reisdorff, a photographic stylist who lives in Manhattan. "It flapped and kept the birds away to a certain extent, but it was really more decorative. The next summer decided to do a scarecrow. I called her the Southampton

Shopping Bag Lady."

Today she makes scarecrows on a regular basis. Among her creations, which sell for $200 to $450, are a flapper wearing a lame dress, a rabbit that guards a friend's flower beds and a huge black cat that has presided over the window of a Bridgehampton, New York, gournet shop.

Mark Baron, who runs his own public relations company in Washington, also makes scare-crows, which he sells for $50 to $100, and he teaches workshops on the procedure. One of his fa-vorites is Big Jake, a red-faced 40-pounder that has never seen a field but accompanies him on vis-its to schools community centers and county fairs.

Baron's and Reisdorff's custom scarecrows are the contemporary end of a long spectrum. In the book "Ephemeral Folk Fig-ures: Scarecrows, Harvest Figures and Snowmen," published by Clarkson & Potter in 1969, Avon Neal writes that the scarecrow as we know it probably originated in Central Europe "at the dawn of agriculture."

Early scarecrows in the United States, he suggested, were strictly utilitarian — a ragged garment fluttering from a wooden crosspiece. As time went on, omamental touches were added; by the mid-1800s tramps were often caught stealing the elaborate clothing off a scarecrow's back.

The use of homemade scare-crows declined with the advent of mechanical devices to ward off farm and garden pests, but in the 1960s, when folk art became a serious subject of study. Neal and traveled throughout New England documenting scarecrows. In 1970 their work appeared in an exhibit at the Museum of American Folk Art in New York called The Ephemeral Image."

Reisdorff does not call herself a folk artist but says she simply enjoys the process of creating ap-pealing scarecrow forms. In her job she combs Manhattan shops for "interesting junk" to use as props in her chents' pictures; as a scarecrow maker she inclulges what she calls her "five-and-dime taste for plastic grapes, old beads and sunglasses." She likes to think that she is making something "both functional and whim-sical — a real fantasy character."

The construction process takes the better part of a day and is basically the same for each figure. Reisdorff buys straw for $4 a bale and works in the garage of her family's house in Water Mill. She makes a large frame out of crossed sticks and attaches wires to form the scarecrow's skeleton. Clothes are then draped on it and are attached with glue. Most of his scarecrows have a festive, rustic look: Big Jake, for example, sports red slacks, red suspenders, a plaid shirt and a checked jacket.

As for the workshops, Baron originated the idea several years ago, when he was working for a nonprofit children's play facility in Washington. "I wanted to develop a program in which partici-pants could be creative and come away with a product," he said.

These days he travels the country overseeing the construction of scarecrows — 30,000 so far. At his workshops he has taught schoolchildren, nursing-home residents and visitors to county fairs. Everyone takes home a scarecrow; people who live in suburbs and cities, he said, put them on their terraces, while those from rural areas use them in fields and gardens.

Do they work? "If there are pots and pans He stuffs the pants and shirt dangling from them, to reflect with straw, ties off the cuffs with light and make noise, it might twine and attaches the parts with scare birds off, but, really, a loops of twine.
